

Kyle Busch Wins Inaugural Cup Race At Kentucky

What was Kyle Busch's dominant impression of his victory in the inaugural NASCAR Sprint Cup race at Kentucky Speedway?

It wasn't that he'll be written into the record book as the first Cup winner at the 1.5-mile track, the first speedway introduced into the series in 10 years.

No, Busch will remember Saturday's Quaker State 400 at Kentucky as the last thing he won on the way to his next race—in this case Sunday, July 9th, the marquee Super Late Model event at Slinger Speedway in Wisconsin.

That's the way Busch thinks—win and move on. Photos by MSA Staff.
