

Randy Weaver Wins SAS Racing Series B.J. Parker Memorial at Talladega Short Track

The Southern All Star Racing Series would roll into Talladega Short Track on Saturday evening for its first official visit of the 2013 racing season and Randy Weaver would score the victory in the B.J. Parker Memorial event that honors the founder of the Southern All Star Racing Series behind the wheel of the Outlaw Race Parts sponsored #116 GRT Race Car powered by a Cornett Race Engine.

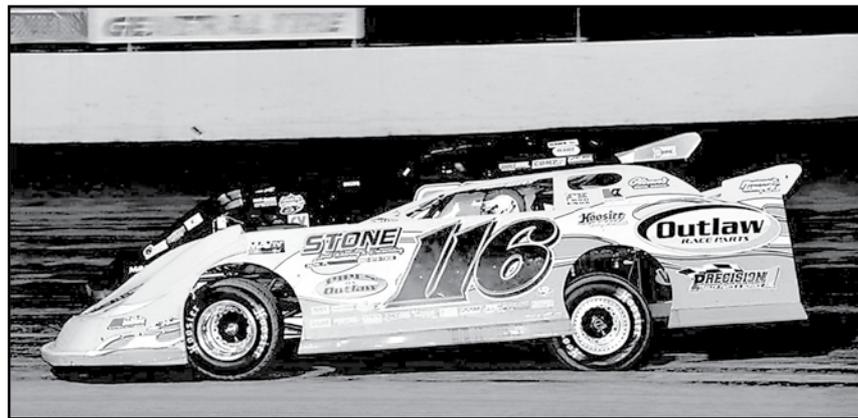

For Weaver, the defending Southern All Star Racing Series champion, the win was his second with the series in 2013 and marked the 22nd series win of his career, which ranks him sixth on the series all-time win list.

The Southern All Stars Dirt Racing Series returns to Talladega Short Track on July 27 to run the Michael Head Jr. Memorial.

reputation or record of dramatic race events that entitle them to be on the elite rooster of showcase venues that a playoff series should be run on.

If they want to highlight the last ten races in some sort of spectacular fashion, then let's use every type of track and mix in those speedways that have produced NASCAR's most legendary battles and stories.

I don't mind Kansas being in the Chase. The fans continue to fill the grandstands there and I think it is important to spread the Chase in that area of America. I'll even give Phoenix a pass for giving the West Coast fans at chance to see some of the final contests of the season.

Where is the road course in the Chase? Watkins Glen might be the perfect way to start to racing playoffs. Drivers heading from short tracking at Richmond to the left and right turns at Watkins Glen seems a perfect way to start the ten-race special. New Hampshire or Watkins Glen? Which one do you think produces the most exciting races? Which one requires the most driver skill? There could also be a plus by beginning the NASCAR playoffs in the biggest media city in the country, New York, if only the New York media would pay attention to them.

Atlanta, Bristol, Indianapolis and Darlington would replace Chicago, Texas, Dover and Homestead on my Chase schedule. Why?

Atlanta Motor Speedway still is named as favorite track to race by several drivers and produced many legendary moments in NASCAR history and close championship races.

Bristol Motor Speedway and Darlington Raceway deserve to be in the end-of-year throwdown as well. History and popularity drive my selection of these two motorsport gems to be on the Chase schedule.

I know the racing at the Brickyard can be boring in the stock cars at times, but Gasoline Alley still reigns as "The Speedway" for the United States of America and should probably be highlighted in the NASCAR playoffs. I can't ever remember a driver complaining about running Indy. They love to win and race there just because of the environment of national racing tradition and history.

Yes, I realize there's about as big of a chance implementing my suggestions, as there is getting DW and Mikey to keep their mouths shut when a camera or microphone is within 500 feet, but an old man can dream can't he?
